From School Library Journal

PreSchool-Grade 1. A child tucked into bed delays going to sleep, needing reassurance of her mother's love. The youngster asks, "Would you still love me....if I were a big scary ape?" or "a super smelly skunk" or "a terrible meat-eating dinosaur," and the list continues. No matter what horrible creature is imagined, Mama says she will always love and care for her child. Warm pastel drawings sweetly illustrate the story; the imaginary creatures are appealing rather than frightening. Reminiscent of Margaret Wise Brown's The Runaway Bunny (HarperCollins, 1942) and Kady Denton's Would They Love a Lion? (Kingfisher, 1995), this is a good choice for storytime or one-on-one sharing. A vividly illustrated bedtime story that shows how the unconditional love of a mother can be tested through the relentless questions of her little boy.

"But Mama, but Mama, what if I were a super smelly skunk, and I smelled so bad that my name was Stinky Face?"

Mothers love their children and this unconditional love is truly tested in I Love You, Stinky Face. Lisa McCourt and Cyd Moore beautifully weave a reassuring tale of the love and affection of a parent. The imaginative son turns himself into a meat-eating dinosaur, a swamp creature and much, much more before being satisfied with the fact that no matter how stinky he is or how slimy of a creature he could possibly be, he is loved and nothing will change that.

My son's favorite book!

By K. Bennett

Just as Guess How Much I Love You is good for a tear or two, this book is guaranteed to bring out the giggles, at least as far as my kids are concerned. Its message, however, is very serious: parental love is unconditional. The story takes place as a mother is tucking her son into bed. "I love you, my wonderful child," she says. But her son asks, "[W]hat if I were a big, scary ape? . . . what if I were a super smelly skunk? . . . what if I were an alligator with big, sharp teeth that could bite your head off. . .?" Would she love him even then? Not only would she still love him, she assures him, but she would treasure the things that make him unique. If he were an ape, she'd comb his hair and make him a banana birthday cake. If he were a skunk, she would cuddle him and whisper, "I love you, Stinky Face." If he were a meat-eating dinosaur whose claws ripped the sheets every night, she'd feed him lots of meat and mend his sheets every day.

sweet book but might frighten toddlers

By Haggasi

I bought "I love you stinky face" for my toddler (almost 3 yrs old). I am expecting a baby in a few weeks and I don't want my toddler to feel like I don't love her anymore since I won't have as much time for her soon. Its a sweet bedtime story and a good read (no too long) but I find some of the creatures mentioned and illustrated in the book might frighten toddlers. There is a green alien, cyclops, swap monster and other creatures that could easily frighten little kids. My daughter doesn't seem frightened but you never know. I definitely recommend to read through the book and then explain what these creatures are (I am certain that most toddlers don't know what a cyclops is). After reading the book we went back page by page and I explained the different animals/creatures to her. Point of the story is that mom loves you no matter what - and thats most important.

One of the best children's books I've read!!!

By Jasmine

This was my favorite book to read to both of my children when they were small. I absolutely love the message throughout the book - basically, the mother assures her child that she will love him no matter what he becomes. It's a beautiful, and funny, book. I buy it for everyone I know who has a baby, and they all say they love it, too. Great gift for new families!
